Plenary keynote sessions

These sessions are typical Zoom sessions with live presentations by the key-note speakers and a short Q&A afterwards. Directly following this keynote, 1-minute prerecorded poster pitch movies are played to enable the audience to choose which posters to visit in the following poster session.

Poster sessions

In the very special poster sessions every poster presenter is assigned her/his own Zoom-room. The audience can move from room to room by following the links in the program. The idea is that by screen sharing, the presenter continuously displays one Powerpoint slide replacing the poster. The continuously changing audience can ask questions or for explanations similar to a physical poster session. It is the responsibility of the poster-presenter to attract people to their room in advance and by their poster-pitch movie. Additionally, people are assigned to visit poster sessions in advance for the evaluation of the posters. The pitch movies will be added to the proceedings and posted on the NCR-Vimeo channel after consent of the authors. The poster sessions themselves are not recorded.

Social sessions

The two social sessions (Thursday and Friday) are dedicated to meet new people and stimulate interaction. Each session has a slightly different outline. The session on Thursday will resemble a blind-speed-date session where you will meet new people, or you meet the people that you already know. The session on Friday will have a more game-like set-up, but the rest it is still a surprise. The social session starts in the plenary room at the indicated time. Key to success is a high attendance of all conference participants.

Parallel sessions

These relatively short sessions resemble typical oral presentations. Earlier experiences have shown that giving a live presentation helps a lot in conveying your message and making people enthusiastic about your work. Therefore, we prefer live presentations (using screen sharing), but if you are more comfortable with presenting a prerecorded movie that is also possible. Presentations are 12 minutes, with 3 minutes for questions afterwards. All presentations (prerecorded and live) will be included in the proceedings and posted on the NCR-Vimeo channel after consent of the authors. Your choice for consent to publish the movies is asked during registration for the conference.
